Map shows the population in high or very high categories of exposure to hazards. The hazards considered include flash floods, landslides, floods, lahars, high swells and winds. The model assessed exposure to these hazards based on a combination of accumulated precipitation, precipitation forecast and soil humidity. Total population in these areas is 6,018,600.

Municipalities with the highest populations in these highest hazard areas are shown in the table.